Mystic Farm & Distillery's Space Aged Bourbon Is Carbon Neutral

North Carolina's premier distillery is aging five barrels of bourbon in space, and every aspect of the mission will be carbon neutral

Durham, NC – January 31, 2023 – Mystic Farm & Distillery, maker of Mystic Galactic, a bourbon whiskey aged for three years on earth and one year in space, confirmed today that all phases of the mission will be carbon neutral.

For the Galactic space mission Mystic plans to contract with Native Eco Public Benefit Corporation, a Certified B-Corporation specializing in carbon offset projects throughout the developing world. Mystic will purchase sufficient carbon offsets to neutralize all the emissions related to production, transportation, launch, packaging, and distribution of Mystic Galactic Bourbon.

After a careful analysis, Mystic estimates that all phases of the Galactic lifecycle from initial production to bottling of the spirit once it returns to earth are expected to generate 732 metric tons of carbon dioxide emissions. To ensure that Mystic continues its legacy of environmental stewardship, the distiller will purchase an additional 368 tons of carbon offsets.

“We want to demonstrate that even the most elite spirit ever created can still be produced in a responsible and sustainable way,” said Jonathan Blitz, co-owner of Mystic. “We want all of our customers to feel good about buying from us, whether they purchase a $25 bottle of Mystic Vision Vodka or a $75,000 bottle of Mystic Galactic.”

A pioneer in sustainable distilling, Mystic is the largest solar powered bourbon distillery, producing bourbon and other spirits using a zero-waste process. The distillery reuses processed water for irrigation, feeds its spent grain to local livestock, reuses or recycles all packaging, and utilizes advanced electrical control technology to reduce its use of power for pumps and other machinery.
